small, secretive forest species) being described yearly from South America (see recent issues of the Wilson Bulletin).

I recommend this book by Fuller. It will intrique you as to what is known and the missed opportunities to gain more information about these species that are gone forever. If one can enjoy reading about extinction and man's inhumanity to wildlife, then Fuller has succeeded in his attempt to educate and arouse us. Currently over 240 bird species are listed as endangered in the "Red Data Book" (King, W. B. 1981. Endangered Birds of the World: The ICBP Red Data Book. Washington, D. C.: Smithsonian Inst. Press). In a grim conclusion to his preface, Fuller notes that the next such volume on extinct birds in 15-20 years will be too large for a single, comprehensive volume as this book, because "There will be just too many extinct species!" Let us hope he is wrong and the many endangered and threatened species, especially in Florida (e.g., Wood Stork, Snail Kite, Grasshopper Sparrow, Scrub Jay, Crested Caracara), will not be included in the next book on extinct birds.—James A. Rodgers Jr., Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, 4005 South Main Street, Gainesville, Florida 32601.

REPORT

FOS records committee report.—This is the fourth report of the Florida Ornithological Society Records Committee, covering 1986. It contains 18 records of which 15 were accepted and 3 were not accepted. One record (86-104) was withdrawn.

Sightings of rare birds in Florida should be submitted to the current secretary of Records Committee. All records published thus far have been placed in a permanent file in the FOS Archives at the Florida Museum of Natural History in Gainesville where they are available for research. Documentation for birds listed in this report were submitted by: Sybil Arbery, Lyn Atherton, James Cavanaugh, Robert Flores, Wally George, Brian Hope, H. P. Langridge, John LaVia, Dan Lipman, Keith MacVicar, Bruce Neville, Cynthia Plockelman, Keith Rott, P. William Smith, Brian Specht, Henry Stevenson, Paul Sykes, Tadziu Trotsky, and Tom Yurchenco.—Helen P. Dowling, Secretary, 203 Tumblin Kling Road, Ft. Pierce, Florida 34982.
