

ber 7, 1926, was killed by J. Bererkle, Stuttgart, Arkansas, on January 23, 1928. While there appears to be some little orderliness in the migration of the Purple Finch northward in spring, there seems to be no law and order in their winter movements.

Information Desired.—I desire information regarding the return of banded migratory birds to the same area to winter. The sex should be determined when possible, and also whether adult or immature. Any records relative to this which banders may care to send me would be greatly appreciated.—WENDELL P. SMITH, Wells River, Vermont.

A Correction.—On page 70 of the last number of the Bulletin (Vol. IV, No. 2, 1928), in the eleventh line from the top, the word "east" should read "west." Some of the printing errors occurring in the Bulletin all too frequently can indeed be charged up to the "Printer's Devil," but this one is mine.—C. L. W.
