

BIRD SIGHTINGS

NOVEMBER/DECEMBER 1999

Jim Berry, Seth Kellogg, Simon A. Perkins, Marjorie W. Rines, and Robert H. Stymeist

November and December, 1999, were dry, sunny, and very mild. In Boston the temperature averaged nearly three degrees above normal in November and almost four degrees above the average December temperatures. The high mark was 72 degrees on November 1, and the low was 12 degrees on Christmas Day in Boston. Rainfall totaled 2.14 inches in November, 2.08 inches under normal, and just 1.52 inches fell in Boston during December. The big news is that no snow fell in Boston during the period, and it is the first time in 109 years of records that not even a trace was recorded from Boston during December! The mild weather certainly contributed to the number of lingering passerines and their survival into late December. Strong winds brought an incredible fallout of migrants on the first weekend of November.

LOONS THROUGH ALCIDS

As usual, this summary does not include most Christmas Bird Count data; see the separate report in this issue for complete CBC results. Some of the rarest birds found on CBCs are included here for purposes of documentation and reader interest.

A Pacific Loon in Barnstable Harbor December 28 was the only one found during the period. Although Red-necked Grebes are never common inland, the total of 3 for western Massachusetts was the lowest since 1987. In contrast, 150 at Eastham was a large number; the big flocks are more often seen during the northbound migration. The Eared Grebe that has made Niles Beach in East Gloucester its winter home continued there for the fifth straight year.

This is a good time of year to look for Northern Fulmar from land, and 34 off Andrews Point in Rockport December 15 was a nice total. Four Cory's Shearwaters November 26 off Truro were unusually late. Other late shearwaters were two Sootys November 24 and a Manx November 25, also off Cape Cod. The tubenose bonanza came at Rockport November 3 when no fewer than 6150 Greater Shearwaters were observed flying southeast past Andrews Point. The previous night there had been a strong low through the interior of New England, with 30-50 mph SSE winds. Under such conditions birds often seek shelter in the lee of Cape Ann and depart to the SE, exiting Ipswich Bay past the point in the morning. By December, Greater Shearwater becomes extremely unusual, so reports from three locations on December 12 and 15 were noteworthy. Five Greaters were also seen on the Stellwagen CBC December 18 for a first count record. The November 2-3 weather system pushed at least 8600 Northern Gannets past Andrews Point, by far the largest count of the season.

The most significant of the late herons this fall was a Green Heron at Southwick November 3; the only later western Massachusetts record was November 6, 1988. Thirty-one Turkey Vultures in Dartmouth December 31 indicated a winter roost that, in fact, remained intact through the winter. Two of the three Greater White-fronted Geese reported were in western Massachusetts, where the only previous record was in 1996. Statewide, reports of this species have become more regular over the past decade or two, and most individuals described have apparently been of the Greenland race, flavirostris, with orange-yellow bills. Observers should always report bill color and other field marks on these birds so that their origin can be surmised, since the several subspecies have distinct ranges.

The Granville hawkwatch site is paying off in Snow Goose sightings; a good October flight was followed by four more southbound flocks November 8 totaling 380 birds. The most interesting of all the white geese found this fall was an apparent Snow/Ross's hybrid (Hot Birds p. 94) that grazed on Plum Island from at least November 9-27. Well documented with photographs, this intriguing bird showed features of both species, but was unfortunately always alone and could not be directly compared with other Snow Geese. Single Brant were notable inland at Gill and Westboro. Mute Swans in double figures have invaded the Connecticut valley, and five were as far west as Cheshire throughout the period.

Wood Ducks were late inland December 26 at Worcester and Westfield. Gadwalls were scarcer in western Massachusetts than in any year since 1982, and were lower than average on the annual Cape Cod Pond Survey. Nine Eurasian Wigeons were typical for the state, although four in one place (Carver) was a good aggregation for this species. This year's token late Blue-winged Teal was at Marstons Mills on Cape Cod December 23. Northern Shovelers showed a slight resurgence on Plum Island after years of low numbers, with as many as 10 in November, and 6 still there as late as December 22. Another dabbler in good numbers there was Northern Pintail, with an impressive total of 455 on November 5.

Among the diving ducks, four Redheads in Essex County were three or four more than average. Ring-necked Ducks maintained their huge fall numbers statewide; 200 in North Egremont was the first large flock seen in that location. The Worcester County drake Tufted Duck continued in Clinton and Sterling for the fifth consecutive winter. Nine Greater Scaup was the lowest total in western Massachusetts since 1981, while 92 Lesser Scaup was the highest western Massachusetts total on record; Lessers were also in good numbers at Cherry Hill Reservoir in West Newbury. A King Eider in Salisbury November 6 was early, and Harlequin Ducks kept up their steady increase at Rockport. Scoters, Oldsquaws, Red-breasted Mergansers, and Buffleheads were scarcer than usual in western Massachusetts.

Hooded Mergansers showed a greater affinity than usual for Cape Cod this fall, as reflected by over 1000 on the Cape Cod annual pond survey. Both Hooded and Common mergansers staged excellent flights in western Massachusetts, with Commons setting a new record for fall migration there. But the real story was the Ruddy Ducks, which flooded most of Massachusetts this fall in probably the greatest numbers on record. Triple-digit figures were routinely encountered, with tallies in three locations approaching a thousand birds. Even accounting for possible (but not certain) duplication where reports came from neighboring towns, it is fair to say that 6000-8000 Ruddys graced the state this fall. They were everywhere, and dozens were still around near the coast at the end of December.

In the raptor department, Ospreys were reported as late as December 21, spilling into Christmas count season. Species seen in better-than-usual numbers at the Granville hawkwatch site at Blueberry Hill were Northern Harrier, Red-shouldered Hawk, and Red-tailed Hawk. These numbers are relative; the four Red-shoulders at Granville were good for the site but lower than past counts at the nearby Mount Tekoa site in Russell. In contrast, 119 Red-tails at Granville broke the single-day record for western Massachusetts, and the seasonal total there was second only to that at Mount Tekoa in 1992. No such numbers of migrating Red-tails were recorded in the eastern half of the state, though it is likely that many coastal Red-tails do not migrate. American Kestrels apparently had a poor season statewide; both Merlins and Peregrine Falcons were reported in much larger numbers. Ten years ago this would have been unthinkable.

Wild Turkeys in Waltham and Brookline reflect that re-introduced species' continued expansion into the urban metroplex, rendering their official name somewhat outdated. A Yellow Rail flushed by a mowing tractor from a wet meadow in the Daniel Webster Wildlife Sanctuary in Marshfield November 1 was later than most; the vast majority of specimens in Massachusetts museums were taken in September and October. Additional birds shot (legally) in northeastern Essex County in the 1970s and 1980s were also taken almost entirely in late September and early October. There are also several winter and spring records of this rare species. Only a single Sora was reported in the entire state, while a Sandhill Crane was seen in Mattapoisett on the late date of December 29.

Late shorebirds are always exciting, and this fall was no exception. Lingerers included a Semipalmated Plover December 19 in Chatham, an American Oystercatcher December 4 on Nantucket, a Whimbrel December 28 in Yarmouth, a Hudsonian Godwit November 25 on Plum Island, a White-rumped Sandpiper November 21 at Quabbin (extending the late date for western Massachusetts by two days), 4 Long-billed Dowitchers December 28 in Hyannis, and, most remarkably, a Semipalmated Sandpiper and 4 Western Sandpipers December 19 in Chatham. All four of the boldfaced species were carefully studied on Christmas counts by experienced observers. A count of 400 Purple Sandpipers in Boston Harbor December 4 is one of the largest in recent memory.

Sixty-one Pomarine Jaegers seen from Rockport at the end of the November 2-3 storm may have been a record for the location, and one on the Stellwagen CBC December 18 was late, as were 35 unidentified jaegers at Eastham December 1. This was a large number of jaegers for December. A Laughing Gull was late at Eastham December 12, while 2100 Bonaparte's Gulls at Lynn Beach and 1600 at Rockport were gratifying totals for the North Shore. Three of the Bonaparte's parted from their brethren long enough to visit the Connecticut River valley in early November, where they are rare, as did at least two Lesser Black-backed Gulls and one or two Glaucous Gulls later in the period. The same November 2-3 storm that brought such large numbers of shearwaters and gannets to Andrews Point in Rockport also pushed in at least 4300 Black-legged Kittiwakes. The season's latest reported tern was, typically, a Forster's, seen at Dennis December 13.

Several Common Murres were documented from Rockport and Provincetown, but Thick-billed Murres and Dovekies were reported in low numbers to start the winter. A total of 2950 Razorbills reported from Rockport December 15 was a staggering number for the North Shore, although well below previous counts from Cape Cod and Nantucket. The only Atlantic Puffins reported were also from Rockport.

DOVES THROUGH GROSBEAKS

Perhaps the big avian news during this period was that Massachusetts birders did not find any Cave Swallows on the first weekend of November, while observers just to our south had more than their share! The weather shifted from a warm Friday and Saturday, November 5-6, with southwest winds, to much cooler and fairly strong northwest winds on Sunday, November 7. These conditions resulted in a substantial fallout of birds, both of "blow-backs" and southward bound migrants. Two Northern Rough-winged Swallows were carefully identified and represent the first November reports for this species in the state. A Chimney Swift reported from Nahant is one of the under 10 individuals recorded in November. There was a good flight of Red-breasted Nuthatches that weekend. The first Bohemian Waxwings were reported, and there were sightings of what proved to be the start of an onslaught of siskins and redpolls.

It was good to have Snowy Owls around again this year after 1998, which produced a 25-year low of just one individual! Barred Owls were everywhere; at least 13 individuals were tallied, including a very cooperative bird that took up residence in the Boston Public Garden and Common and could be seen hunting squirrels during the day. The only thing that sent him to quieter quarters was the fireworks display early New Year's Eve. The famous Long-eared Owls returned to their not-so-Secret Trail roost at the Daniel Webster Wildlife Sanctuary in Marshfield. Seven Long-ears and two Short-ears delighted birders with their nightly performance over the fields of the Sanctuary. A huge movement of Northern Saw-whet Owls went largely undetected by diurnal birders, but was documented by Norm Smith's banding project in four southeastern Massachusetts locations.

Western Massachusetts birders reported the most sapsuckers in December since 1985, and at Mount Auburn Cemetery as many as four different individuals were observed through December, feeding mostly in nikko fir trees. On Nantucket, three Hairy Woodpeckers tied the all time high count for the island, the most recorded there since November 1980! The warm weather accounted for the more than normal reports of Eastern Phoebe during the period, with a report from Deerfield making the third December in a row that this species has been tallied in western Massachusetts. Ash-throated Flycatchers seem to be almost routine in the fall as of late, and an individual reported from Westport may have arrived with that big southwest airflow in early November. A Western Kingbird at Daniel Webster Wildlife Sanctuary was only the fourth bird found in the state this fall. It was a really big year for Northern Shrikes, the second biggest year of record for the state with at least 73 individuals noted during the period. A Common Raven, first noted in September, was reported off and on during the period from Halibut Point in Rockport, but of more interest is the continued increase of ravens in western Massachusetts, with 53 individuals tallied in Becket on December 15.

For the fourth fall in a row, birders in western Massachusetts recorded a poor flight of Red-breasted Nuthatches. Counts of these birds were spotty in eastern sections, with a few high counts in coastal locations. It was also the poorest fall showing of Brown Creeper in western sections, but on the bright side Carolina Wren numbers in the west were the best since 1992. Winter Wrens were well reported in the east while just nine birds in the west represented the lowest count since 1985. A Blue-gray Gnatcatcher, originally found on the Boston CBC, was still present Christmas Eve and constitutes the latest report for this species in the state. It was another big fall for Eastern Bluebirds and American Robins; and the warm weather certainly was responsible for the numbers of Hermit Thrushes reported. The weather effect also added to the number of warbler reports! Eighteen species were reported during the period; unusually late species included Nashville, Yellow, Magnolia, Cape May, Black-throated Blue, Black-throated Green, Prairie, Ovenbird, Northern Waterthrush, and Wilson's. The open fields without the white stuff made sparrows linger as well as the Horned Larks, Eastern Meadowlarks, and Snow Buntings.

The winter finches did not disappoint birders, with the best flight of Pine Siskins in western Massachusetts since 1993, and a great showing of Common Redpolls, although not as many as 1993 or 1997. The numbers of Evening Grosbeaks in western sections were an improvement over 1998 when there were no reports, but still were below average. Both species of crossbills were reported in nearly equal numbers, and Salisbury was a wonderful place to see and study them up close. Bohemian Waxwings started appearing in a number of locations with promises of more to come! A few Hoary Redpolls were noted especially early; the November sighting in West Springfield is the first report ever in western Massachusetts before February.

Rare finds included a Northern Wheatear from Northampton, and a most cooperative MacGillivray's Warbler (Hot Birds, page 94) from the Fenway section of Boston which delighted scores of birders for nearly a month and had the decency to hang around for the Boston CBC! A Spotted Towhee was the first regional sighting for Western Massachusetts and again this bird lingered, exciting birders who were thrilled to add this recently-split species to their Massachusetts list. A Henslow's Sparrow was also reported. The Boreal Chickadee continued at a feeder in West Newbury throughout the period.

HOW TO CONTRIBUTE BIRD SIGHTINGS TO BIRD OBSERVER

This publication prints monthly compilations of reports of birds seen in Massachusetts and offshore waters. Space does not permit the inclusion of all material submitted. However, bird sightings sent to Bird Observer are archived at the Massachusetts Audubon Society. Our compilers select and summarize for publication sightings that provide a snapshot of birdlife during the reporting period. These sightings include early and late dates for migratory species, maximum counts of migrants and some common birds, and species found beyond their normal ranges.

Sightings for any given month must be reported in writing by the eighth of the following month. Send to Bird Sightings, Robert H. Stymeist, 94 Grove Street, Watertown, MA 02172. Please organize reports by month and by species in current A.O.U. checklist order. Include name and phone number of observer, common name of species, date of sighting, location, number of birds, number of observers, and information relevant to age, sex, morph, etc.

Species on the Review List of the Massachusetts Avian Records Committee, as well as species unusual as to place, time, or known nesting status in Massachusetts should be reported promptly to the Massachusetts Avian Records Committee, c/o Wayne Petersen, Massachusetts Audubon Society, South Great Road, Lincoln, MA 01773.

* Indicates a species on the review list of the Massachusetts Avian Records Committee (MARC). Because these sightings are generally published before the MARC votes, they normally have not been approved by the MARC. The editors publish records that are supported by details, multiple observers, or both.
