

BIRD SIGHTINGS

March/April, 2005

Seth Kellogg, Marjorie Rines, Robert H. Stymeist, and Jeremiah Trimble

The March lion roared into the month with a snowstorm, adding to an already huge seasonal snow supply. Nor did the lion let up during the first half of the month: it added more snow to the region, creating big problems with snow removal and power outages for many areas. The temperature averaged 35.3° in Boston, 3.6° below normal. The high for the month was just 55° on March 22, only the third time in thirty-five years that the March high did not exceed 55° all month. Only five days were warmer than normal. The low for the month was 11° on March 9, 10° colder than last March. Measurable rain fell on eight days and totaled 3.89 inches in Boston, just about half an inch above normal. Snowfall reached 14.5 inches for the month, 6.5 inches above average for March. The seasonal snowfall for Boston totaled 86.6 inches, more than double the sixty-six year average at Logan Airport of 40.7 inches. This seasonal total is the fourth highest on record and the most since the record 107.6 inches of 1995-6. Some South Shore communities saw more snow, and on Cape Cod and the Islands, all seasonal snowfall records were shattered.

April was mild, with a taste of summer on April 20 when the mercury reached a toasty 87° in Boston. The month averaged 49.7° in Boston, 1.4° above normal. The low was 33° on April 12 and 13. Rainfall totaled 3.17 inches, about half an inch below normal, and there was only a trace of snowfall on April 12. Southwest winds were recorded on April 7, 25, 28, and 30; winds were out of the south on April 13, 16, 17, and from April 22-26.

WATERFOWL THROUGH ALCIDS

A few goose sightings provided some excitement in March, a period that can be known for its lack thereof (excitement, not geese). Greater White-fronted Geese have started to occur annually in Massachusetts during the last decade. This is particularly true in western Massachusetts, where an individual of this species was observed in Hatfield and Whatley at the end of March. A Brant that spent all of March and half of April on Tuckernuck Island was identified as a Dark-bellied Brant (Branta bernicla bernicla), a taxon currently considered a subspecies by the AOU and BOU, whose normal range spans Europe and Siberia. Finally, a Barnacle Goose was encountered at Bolton Flats at the end of March. This species has been sighted with some increasing frequency in Massachusetts, and concurrently there is an increase in breeding populations in Greenland and northern Europe. Several recent sightings have been accepted by the Massachusetts Avian Records Committee (MARC) as representing birds of wild origin, supported by the changing status of Barnacle Goose in North America, and the consistent timing of sightings during migration and winter. The most interesting aspect of this sighting was the company the Barnacle Goose was keeping — a hybrid Barnacle X Canada Goose. At least one observer commented that the two appeared to be paired together, begging the question, “Did these two birds escape together from captivity, or is it possible that a wild hybrid Barnacle X Canada Goose encountered, and maybe paired with, a full Barnacle Goose (possibly in North America)?” It is for questions like these that we are lucky to have the MARC working for us. In the United States the Eurasian Teal is considered a subspecies of Green-winged Teal, but it has been accorded full species status in Europe. Single Eurasian Teals in Newbury and West Harwich were notable.

Pacific Loon is a casual visitor recently turned annual (congratulations!). Two were sighted at one of their favorite Massachusetts sites, Race Point in Provincetown. It would be a shame, or perhaps disrespectful, not to recognize the continued presence of the Eared Grebe at Gloucester.

Some herons, perhaps due to the lingering winter, were a bit late in their arrival in Massachusetts. For example, a count at Kettle Island in Manchester, a traditional roosting site and nesting colony, yielded only a single Great Egret on March 25. The observer noted how this contrasted with a count of more than eighty herons of five species on March 26, 2003! By the second week of April counts were more typical there, and included seventy-seven Great Egrets, 143 Snowy Egrets, and ten Little Blue Herons. A White-faced Ibis at Plum Island on April 25 was a very exciting discovery, only the fourth or fifth record for Massachusetts. The Black Vulture counts from southwestern Massachusetts topped out at thirty-one during the period. Two kites of two species were noted during the last week of April in southeastern Massachusetts. A Swallow-tailed Kite was reported from Martha's Vineyard and a Mississippi Kite was sighted in Truro. It was very exciting to hear of new active Bald Eagle nests at West Newbury and Lakeville in addition to the known nesting sites in Massachusetts.

Sandhill Cranes continue to amaze, though we may soon lose the amazement as their occurrence becomes more and more routine. There were as many as nine individuals sighted throughout the state during the reporting period, including a flock of three at Carlisle. Single American Golden-Plovers (or perhaps the same one) were seen at South Beach in Chatham on March 20 and at Edgartown on Martha's Vineyard on April 13. American Golden-Plover is unusual at this time of year; in fact, there are only four sightings between March 15 and April 15 over the last ten years. Sightings of dowitchers during early to mid-April provided some additional shorebird interest in Massachusetts. Two very early Short-billed Dowitchers were found at Newbury on April 4. This sighting represents one of the earliest spring arrivals for Short-billed Dowitcher in Massachusetts. Other early records include a single bird found at Plum Island on March 23, 1978, and three found in Marshfield on April 4, 1954. Even more unusual was a Long-billed Dowitcher found in Newburyport Harbor on April 17. This species is very rare in Massachusetts in the spring. In fact, there is only one spring record in the state during the last ten years, and only a handful of additional historical records. Still, the most exciting Charadriiforme sighting of the spring was certainly the California Gull encountered at Lynn on April 29. The bird, an immaculate adult, represents only the fourth state record for Massachusetts, following closely on the heels of the third state record, a young bird found on Nantucket over the winter.

DOVES THROUGH FINCHES

A White-winged Dove was discovered at Mount Auburn Cemetery on April 22 and remained there until May 1, enabling hundreds of birders to see and photograph this rare visitor from the southwest. There is also a population in Florida that has adapted well to the environment and is expanding its range to the north.

Great Horned Owls were reported with young from three locations and Snowy Owls lingered into early April in Duxbury and at Logan Airport, and another Snowy was present on Tuckernuck Island as late as April 14. In Gloucester, according to the Daily Times, a woman heard scratching coming from her stovepipe and discovered an owl stuck in the pipe; it escaped through the chimney before it could be identified. Sapsuckers returned in numbers by mid-April and Red-headed Woodpeckers were noted from Tyringham, Wales, and Brimfield.

Birding really heats up in April, and this year the weather heated up as well. The hot spell that sent the temperatures into the eighties and some nineties on April 20 did not bring in many migrants since the winds were out of the northeast that day, but it did bring a significant push to the foliage. There were some extremely early migrants noted earlier, especially from the Vineyard and Nantucket. In late March there were some sustained southerly winds followed by northeasterly winds. There is evidence that these early birds encounter the cold front while in flight and then are deflected eastward over the Atlantic. Their first landfall can be on our offshore islands. This year, a White-eyed Vireo, one or two Prothonotary Warblers, a Kentucky Warbler, a Rose-breasted Grosbeak, and an Indigo Bunting were noted in late March and early April on the Vineyard. A Blue Grosbeak on Nantucket and a Summer Tanager in West Dennis also were recorded at the same time. A similar weather scenario happened again in late April when another group of migrants was reported weeks earlier than normal. This included a Common Nighthawk on Plum Island on April 30, the same day the Joppa Flats banding station netted a Swainson's Thrush, both birds usually not expected until well into May. Other species noted were Prothonotary Warblers in Chatham and one very cooperative bird from Marblehead Neck, a Worm-eating Warbler. There was a Summer Tanager in Chilmark, another in Bridgewater, and several Indigo Buntings, with one feeder in Edgartown hosting two to three females and three-plus males, along with a female Painted Bunting!

Overall, several observers reported earlier-than-normal migrants. Seth Kellogg noted Blue-headed Vireo, Blue-gray Gnatcatcher, Chestnut-sided Warbler, American Redstart, and White-crowned Sparrow, all with early arrival dates in western Massachusetts. Allan Keith on the Vineyard reported the earliest-known arrivals for the island for Northern Rough-winged Swallow, White-eyed Vireo, and Rose-breasted Grosbeak. Mark Lynch noted a typical number of land birds this spring with exceptional numbers of blackbirds. Mark and several others noted the scarcity of Carolina Wrens, which probably suffered a population decrease due to the severe winter; this was especially noted on Cape Cod and the Islands, both of which had record snowfall.

This was not a good period for rarities. A Varied Thrush was located at a feeder in Mendon, a Clay-colored Sparrow at a feeder in Southwick, and a scattering of winter finches was noted, including a report of six Red Crossbills in Hadley. There were a few reports of Pine Siskins gathering nesting material, though no reports of any juveniles at feeders. R. Stymeist

Erratum

In the summary for the January-February 2005 records, we erroneously stated:

A Mew Gull carefully observed in Haverhill was determined to be the European "Common Gull," Larus canus canus, rather than L. c. brachyrhynchus, the subspecies from western North America that is more typical of Massachusetts sightings.

"Common Gull," Larus canus canus, is the subspecies more typical of Massachusetts sightings.

HOW TO CONTRIBUTE BIRD SIGHTINGS TO BIRD OBSERVER

Sightings for any given month must be reported in writing by the eighth of the following month, and may be submitted by postal mail or e-mail. Send written reports to Bird Sightings, Robert H. Stymeist, 94 Grove Street, Watertown, MA 02172. Include name and phone number of observer, common name of species, date of sighting, location, number of birds, other observer(s), and information on age, sex, and morph (where relevant). For instructions on e-mail submission, visit: <<http://massbird.org/birdobserver/sightings/>>.

Species on the Review List of the Massachusetts Avian Records Committee (indicated by an asterisk [*] in the Bird Reports), as well as species unusual as to place, time, or known nesting status in Massachusetts, should be reported promptly to the Massachusetts Avian Records Committee, c/o Marjorie Rines, Massachusetts Audubon Society, South Great Road, Lincoln, MA 01773, or by e-mail to <marj@mrines.com>.
