

'Audubon Societies in their Relation to the Farmer.'—In a paper of about a dozen pages,¹ with the above title, Mr. Oldys has given a clear and succinct account of the Audubon Societies and their work. After referring briefly to the economic value of birds, and to the causes that have operated to effect their decrease, he proceeds to an account of the Audubon Societies, beginning with the first national movement in 1886, and the reawakening of bird protection sentiment in 1896, resulting in the founding of some thirty societies with, in 1902, a joint membership of 65,000. Their purposes and methods of work are detailed and a résumé is given of the results of their efforts, with finally a statement of 'The Farmer's Interest in Bird Protection,' or, rather, of why he should be interested in it.—J. Summary of Game Laws for 1903.²—This presents, in a brief form for ready reference, "the provisions of the various State laws which primarily form the basis of the Lacey act and which govern the trade in game, namely, those relating to close seasons, licenses, shipment, and sale." The scope of the summary includes the United States and Canada, and it being necessary to condense as much as possible, the matter is mostly presented in tabular form, and in a series of maps. The tabulated matter shows: (1) the close seasons for game in the United States and Canada (pp. 9-19); (2) export of game prohibited by State laws (pp. 22-26); (3) restrictions on sale of game (pp. 32-35); licenses for hunting game (pp. 37-40); (5) close seasons for game in the United States and Canada, by States and Provinces (pp. 44-48); (6) close seasons for game under County laws (pp. 48-53); summary of the principal restrictions by non-residents (pp. 53-56). Five maps show which States and Provinces (1) require nonresidents to obtain hunting licenses, and the amount of the license fee; (2) which prohibit export of game; (3) which permit export of game for propagation; (4) which prohibit sale of game at all times; (5) which limit the amount of game that may be killed. All the States, except Kentucky and Mississippi, have some kind of a nonexport law, varying in scope in respect to the kinds of game thus protected. All the States and Territories now prohibit the export of quail, except four, in one of which no quail occur, and in two of which there is no nonexport law; in the other, several counties prohibit such export.
