THE AUK

A Quarterly Journal of Ornithology

ORGAN OF THE AMERICAN ORNITHOLOGISTS' UNION

Manuscripts should be typewritten if possible. As an aid in bibliography, titles should be brief. References to literature, if few, may be inserted in parentheses at the appropriate places in the text, or listed at the end of the paper rather than in footnotes. Roman numerals and extensive tables are to be avoided. Line drawings intended for text illustrations should be in India ink; half-tones cannot be printed in the text since the paper is unsuitable. Longer articles should have a brief summary at the end. Except on request, no proofs of 'General Notes' or short communications will be submitted to authors.

Twenty-five copies of leading articles are furnished to authors free of charge. Reprints from 'General Notes,' 'Correspondence,' etc., must be ordered from the Editor when the manuscript is submitted.

All articles and communications intended for publication and all books and publications intended for review should be sent to the Editor,

Claims for replacement of missing or defective copies of 'The Auk' will not be honored unless received by the Business Manager within six months of publication of the particular number involved.

National Audubon Sanctuaries

22 wardens of the National Audubon Society currently patrol over 3,500,000 acres of land in the United States. This includes lands owned, leased, guarded under authority of resolutions of state bodies or under letters of authority from land-owners, and still other lands patrolled by common consent.

Large concentrations of wildlife, especially of non-game varieties, are thus given real protection; included are many relatively rare species of birds, such as the Everglade Kite, Audubon's Caracara, Glossy Ibis, Great White Heron, Reddish Egret, Roseate Spoonbill, and Limpkin.

National Audubon sanctuaries are maintained for the benefit of the wildlife therein; Nature is allowed to work out its own balances; carefully adopted restrictions apply to every form of human interference.

This activity of the National Audubon Society would seem to constitute an important contribution to the conservation of America's natural resources.
