ORGAN OF THE AMERICAN ORNITHOLOGISTS' UNION

Manuscripts should be typewritten if possible. As an aid in bibliography, titles should be brief. References to literature, if few, may be inserted in parentheses at the appropriate places in the text, or listed at the end of the paper rather than in footnotes. Roman numerals and extensive tables are to be avoided. Line drawings intended for text illustrations should be in India ink; half-tones cannot be printed in the text since the paper is unsuitable. Longer articles should have a brief summary at the end. Except on request, no proofs of 'General Notes' or short communications will be submitted to authors.

Twenty-five copies of leading articles are furnished to authors free of charge. Reprints from 'General Notes,' 'Correspondence,' etc., must be ordered from the Editor when the manuscript is submitted.

All articles and communications intended for publication and all books and publications intended for review should be sent to the Editor,

Nature Education and the War

The conservation of natural resources is vital to the national and international war program. The primary productive powers of our continent are dependent upon the maintenance of biological balance. There is danger that this be overlooked amid the pressing problems of direct military and industrial mobilization. In times like these, it is the duty of the Audubon Societies and the host of other organizations devoted to nature education to redouble their efforts, with increased stress on practical applications with relation to the war.

With the carrying of the war to the civilian populations of the world, the stamina of citizens in resisting the impacts of modern weapons and propaganda becomes more critical than ever. Man's need of nature increases in direct ratio with the stress of his human relations. The chief problems of war remain within ourselves. Never was there a time when it seemed more urgent that our people utilize those outlets for relaxation of tension, peace and sanity of mind, health of body and spiritual contentment which an understanding appreciation of nature affords. Promotion of such human conservation through nature education is a wartime contribution of the first order.
