To members of the A. O. U.:

One of the aims of the Publication Committee is to bring to you, through the medium of this newly established advertising section, information on where to buy the products, facilities and services that you may need to further your particular interest in birds.

To advertisers in ‘The Auk’:

With a background of 57 consecutive years of regular publication, ‘The Auk’ provides a ready means of reaching a stable reader-public, small in terms of circulation, but large in terms of enthusiastic use of equipment, books and aids to scientific research.

ORGAN OF THE AMERICAN ORNITHOLOGISTS' UNION

Manuscripts should be typewritten if possible. As an aid in bibliography, title should be brief, within one printed line. References to literature may be inserted in parentheses at the appropriate places in the text, or listed at the end of the paper rather than in footnotes. Roman numerals and extensive tables are to be avoided. Line drawings intended for text illustrations should be in India ink; halftones can only be printed as plates. Longer articles should have a brief summary at the end. Except on request, no proofs of 'General Notes' or short communications will be submitted to authors.

Twenty-five reprints of leading articles are furnished authors free of charge. Reprints from 'General Notes,' 'Correspondence,' etc., and those from leading articles in excess of twenty-five must be paid for by the author, and must be ordered from the editor when the manuscript is submitted. Printed covers can be furnished at additional cost.

All articles and communications intended for publication and all books and publications intended for review should be sent to the Editor,

The National Audubon Society, devoted to the protection and preservation of our native wildlife, conceives this purpose to be integral in a vastly greater cause. The name borne by the organization is not merely that of a genius of bird painting, but of a man of vision, devoted to his adopted country. From his patriotism and his love of nature we trace our concept and in this spirit we pursue our objectives.

"The conservation battle cannot be a short, sharp engagement but must be grim, tenacious warfare..." Ira N. Gabrielson, Chief of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, has written. In this warfare to help restore our people’s heritage—the American Wild—the National Audubon Society surely belongs in the vanguard of those who have joined forces to stay tirelessly on the job. By reason of its history and its achievements, by virtue of the victories which it has already won, and because of the demonstrated loyalty of its thousands of members and friends, the National Audubon Society confidently appeals for the funds with which to continue and strengthen its considerable share of the guardianship of every American’s heritage.
