The U. S. Department of the Interior has issued a revised list of the 'National Wildlife Refuges Administered by the Fish and Wildlife Service,' Wildlife Leaflet 179. The Service now administers 275 national refuges with an aggregate of 17,620,526 acres, of which 188 (of nearly 3,000,000 acres) are primarily for waterfowl and seventy others for other birds as well as other forms of wildlife. Permission to visit any of these refuges may be obtained by writing or calling upon the refuge managers. The areas offer fine opportunities for bird photography and study.
