A Passion for Birds

American Ornithology after Audubon
Mark V. Barrow, Jr.

In the decades following the Civil War many Americans became "bird watchers." By the turn of the century, hundreds of thousands of devotees were rushing to join Audubon societies, purchase field guides, and keep records of the species they encountered in the wild.

Mark Barrow vividly reconstructs this story through the experiences of birdwatchers, collectors, conservationists, and taxidermists, and also through the eyes of a relatively new breed of bird enthusiast: the technically oriented ornithologist. This wide-ranging book will interest ornithologists, birdwatchers, and anyone curious about the historical roots of today's birding boom.

"Mark Barrow has written an admirably comprehensive, penetrating, and very readable treatment of the history of ornithology, one that fills a gaping hole in the history of science as well as ornithological literature. This book will surely be the standard account for many years to come."

A Neotropical Companion

An Introduction to the Animals, Plants, and Ecosystems of the New World Tropics

John Kricher

A Neotropical Companion is an extraordinarily readable introduction to the American tropics, the lands of Central and South America, their remarkable rainforests and other ecosystems, and the creatures that live there. It is the most comprehensive one-volume guide to the Neotropics available today. Widely praised in its first edition, it remains a book of unparalleled value to tourists, students, and scientists alike. This second edition has been substantially revised and expanded.

Warblers of Europe, Asia, and North Africa

Kevin Baker

Warblers are the archetypal "little brown birds" that pose so many identification problems for birdwatchers. These problems are sometimes complicated by the fact that not all warblers are brown and small; some are brightly colored and relatively large. Jeff Baker helps novices and experts alike in a unique book covering all old world warblers in Europe and Asia.

48 color plates. 144 color maps.

Messages from an Owl

Max R. Terman

"This is a meticulously recorded scientific observation. But it's one appealingly interwoven with emotion and sentiment. In a word, it's readable, for ornithologist and layman alike. . . . The strength of Terman's writing is an unaffected blend of feeling and precise scientific note-taking. . . . It could well take its place among naturalist classics."
