Ospreys:
A Natural and
Unnatural History
Alan F. Poole

"Alan Poole has taken our favorite bird and put it in global perspective... a tremendous job. Be sure to get it!" —Roger Tory Peterson

An up-to-date look at the natural history and status of a bird that has become a major symbol of international bird conservation. It is illustrated by many photographs and by specially commissioned line drawings by a noted bird artist.

The National Audubon Society's AMERICAN BIRDS presents a field ornithology workshop at Elk Lake——

Saturday, June 10–Friday, June 16, 1989

A unique opportunity to experience boreal-breeding bird species at the beautiful, 12,000-acre Elk Lake Forest Preserve in the heart of the Adirondack Mountains High Peaks region, New York.

This workshop will be led by Susan Roney Drennan, Editor of AMERICAN BIRDS and author of the definitive site guide, Where to Find Birds in New York State, Geoff LeBaron, Christmas Bird Count Editor, and a host of other leaders and crack field assistants. This means small groups!!

Explore one of the most pristine boreal/montane forests remaining in the Adirondacks.

Observe nesting Common Loons, Black-backed Woodpeckers, Olive-sided and Alder flycatchers, Common Ravens, Boreal Chickadees, Gray-cheeked Thrushes, and Blackburnian, Blackpoll, and Mourning warblers.

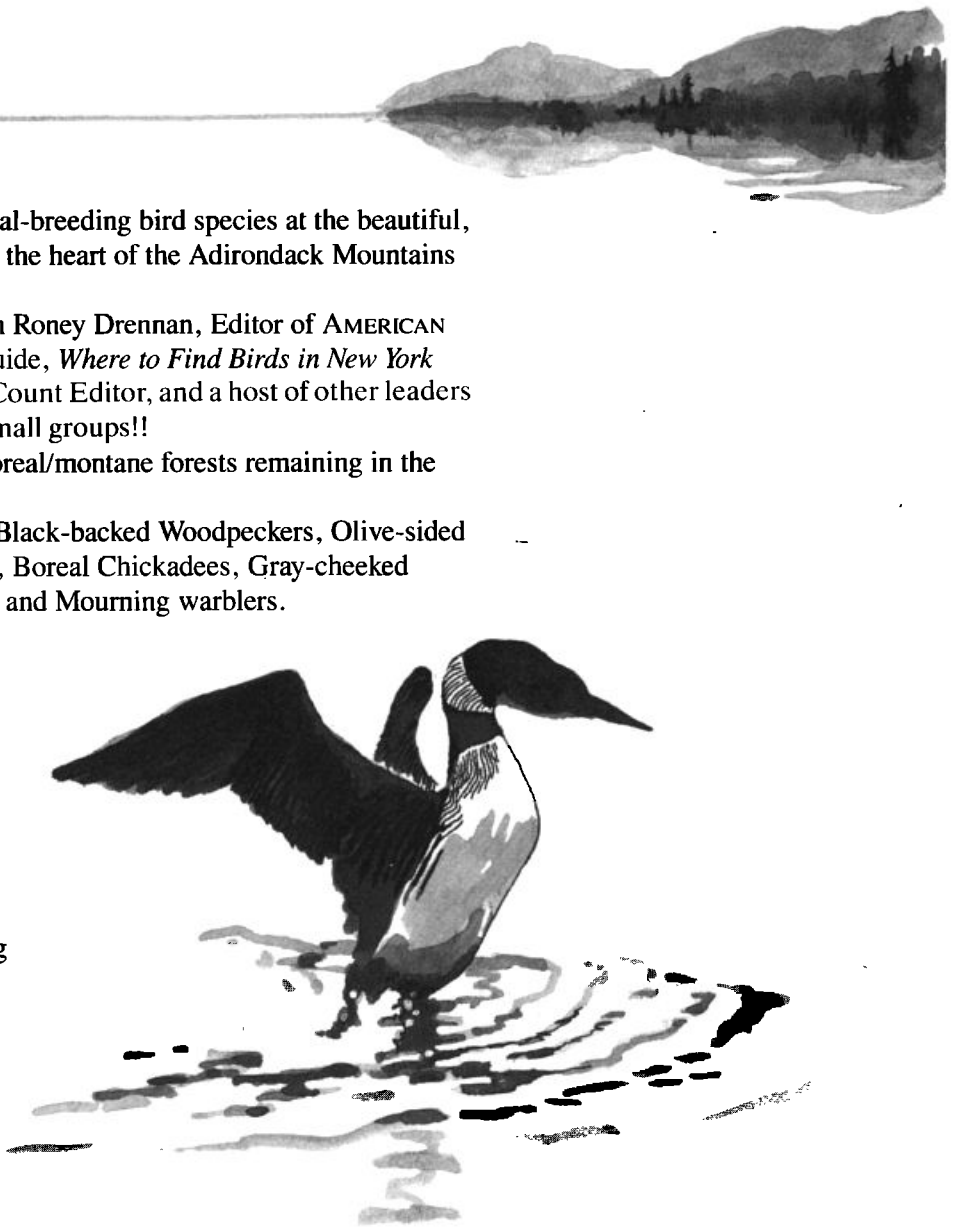

Comfortable accommodations and three delicious country-style meals served daily are special features of the Elk Lake Lodge.

An incomparable opportunity for the bird photographer!! Slide presentations nightly. Mist-netting and bird banding.

Limited reservations so act now.

Complete fee for six days including meals, tax, and gratuities: $700. Single occupancy: $750. Deposit: $150 per person.

Write for reservations: Elk Lake Lodge, North Hudson, New York 12855 or call (518) 532-7616.
