song I have seen. I have represented it thus: tu wee tu wee te cheu, the accent being on the second and fourth syllables which seem about a third higher than the short, staccato first and third syllables, the fifth being still higher and short, while last is a rapidly falling inflection. The song was a clear whistling, unmistakable song. The bird sang at intervals of about fifteen seconds during our study of it.

PASSENGER PIGEON, Ectopistes migratorius.—A small flock of eight or ten Wild Pigeons were seen flying over Beaufort river on the morning of March 18th at ten minutes before 7 o'clock. The birds were about fifty feet up and flying a straight course to the Southeast when I saw them. Two other persons, both of them "old stagers," also observed them, and separately mentioned it to me before I had a chance to tell them.

POTTAWATTOMIE NAMES FOR THE AMERICAN CROW, Corvus americanus.—I have a valued letter from the late Chief Simon Pokagon, from which I extract the following: Our people in Michigan know almost nothing about the Awn-dayng (Crow,) until the white man came amongst us. Hence we called it the Wan-be an-ne-ne-g me-che-maw-kaw-te-Pe-nay-shen (The white man's big pluck bird)." So much for the Crow's dislike of unbroken wilderness, and its boldness in attacking larger and savager birds.

SONG OF THE KENTUCKY WARBLER Geothlypis formosa, A CORRECTION.—On page 47 of BULLETIN No. 30, WARBLER SONGS, an unfortunate transposition has occured in the description of the migrant and breeding types of song of this locality. I have heard the song of the supposed migrants from the first arrivals only, on semi-occasional early morning visits to their haunts, and it was soon displaced by the regular breeding song of later arrivals. The first and rarer song should be: Too-dle too-dle too-dle too-dle, exactly as described in Chapman's Handbook. The breeding song for this locality is: peer-ry peer-ry peer-ry, often chee chee chee peer-ny peer-ny, delivered in a clear whistle as described by Professor Jones. I have found
